MEDICINAL.

Narrow Chests.

The old theory that consumption was inherited is utterly discredited by modern medical science. The germs of consumption must be received from without. These germs are everywhere. They are constantly being received and cast out by the healthy system. It is the narrow chested whose inheritance is weakness, who fall a prey to consumption because they are too weak of lung to resist and throw off disease.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes weak lungs strong. It cures obstinate deep-seated coughs, bleeding lungs, weakness, emaciation and other conditions which if neglected or unskillfully treated find a fatal termination in consumption.

$3,000 FORFEIT will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y., if they cannot show the original signature of the individual volunteering the testimonial before, and also of the writers of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing, thus proving their genuineness.

"In the spring of 1901 I was taken with hemorrhage of the lungs, and became very weak and short of breath, lost flesh and had no appetite," writes Mr. E. L. Robinson, of Xerxes, Tenn. "I was persuaded to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The first few bottles seemed to do me but little good. Thought I would soon be a victim of that dreaded disease when my friends persuaded me to give up my medicine and use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I weighed 150 pounds now, and when I commenced I only weighed 100 pounds. If any one doubts this statement I will be pleased to answer any inquiry."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." Nothing is "just as good." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the blood system from impurities.

ERROR OF JUDGMENT?

The point in regard to the burning and wrecking of the steamer General Slocum, a point upon which so much hangs, yet which will probably never be settled beyond dispute, is: Did Captain Van Schaick, of the Slocum, lose time through an error of judgment by steaming nearly two miles to North Brother Island, instead of heading his boat to the several points along the river to which he could have taken her? Careful investigation has been made for the purpose of clearing up this point. The result is that experienced rivermen, usually tugboat captains who have been towing in the Harlem river and upper East river for 25 years and know every shoal and flat and cove in the waters thereabouts, agree that there were no less than eight points at which the Slocum might have been beached between the discovery of fire in her forward compartment when she was in the East river opposite One Hundred and Fenth street and her final beaching on the point of North Brother Island, something more than two miles up the river.

After the whole course of the ill-fated boat had been gone over it was hard to understand why Captain Van Schaick steered the Slocum as he did, with certain salvation for his passengers and crew within 400 feet, and the experienced rivermen who surveyed the course were unable to understand as were others who make merely casual trips up the river. None was willing to believe that Captain Van Schaick was anything but the brave, competent man that his record shows him to have been.

All were loath to believe that Captain Van Schaick did anything except what seemed to him best. The opinion of these tugboat men is summed up best, perhaps, expressed in the statement made by one old captain who has been working in those rivers longer than any other licensed pilot there. He said: "It is hard to understand why Captain Van Schaick did not see the e other beaches that were right at hand. In my opinion Captain Van Schaick saw that a good many of his passengers would be injured, and believing, maybe, that few could escape, he thought that the best thing that he could do for them would be to get as close as he could to a hospital and so steered for North Brother Island, where he knew that there were hospitals, physicians and nurses. It seems to me that he could not have realized that the Slocum would burn so quickly or else he would have done differently."

Sinking of Japanese Transport.

It is impossible to ascertain accurately the figures of the losses sustained by the Japanese as a result of the sinking of the transport Hitachi and the shelling of the transport Sado. A survivor reports to Vice Admiral Tanoda that the Hitachi was hit 60 times and caught fire. A boat from the Sado was sent to the Russians for the purpose of a parley. The Russians agreed to give the Sado 40 minutes to clear ship and said they would take the noncombatants on board. The Russians later, it is declared, refused to receive the noncombatants, except an Englishman, the chief mate, and before the 40 minutes had expired the Russians, it is further said, torpedoed the ship on both sides.

Colonel Lucchi, commanding the troops on the Hitachi, and many others committed suicide. The majority of the passengers of the Sado were rescued. The greater number of those who were on board the Hitachi was annihilated. The fire was terrific and in a few minutes the decks were covered with corpses awash with blood. One shell which struck the engine room killed 200 men. The ship began to fill and sank gradually by the stern. At 6 o'clock in the evening she was completely submerged. Captain Campbell, the English master of the transport, jumped overboard at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and is numbered among the missing. The chief engineer was killed on the bridge. The Sado subsequently grounded on the east coast of Okino Island. It is expected that she can be saved.

Astral Body Departs When We Are Asleep.

"During sleep a man may achieve great things for himself and for humanity," said Charles W. Leadbeater, the London theosophist, in a lecture on "Dreams; Their Nature and Cause," given to a large audience in the Baker Building in Philadelphia on Thursday night. "A man's true self," said Mr. Leadbeater, "is a thing apart from his physical body. In sleep the true man, or thinker, separates himself from his physical body and etheric double, dwelling apart from them in his astral body on the astral plane. Dreams may be of purely physical origin or they may be memories of actual experiences on the astral plane. The average person does not remember his astral experiences, but the memory of what happens upon this higher plane to which every sleeper goes is involved in the course of time by all men. The man himself never sleeps, for he is immortal and requires no rest. It is only his coarse outer garment that needs repair at night. A man may waste his astral life or he may employ it wisely to acquire knowledge and to help others."

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets Better than a Doctor's Prescription.

Mr. J. W. Turner, of Truham, Va., says that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have done him more good than anything he could get from the doctor. If any physician in this country was able to compound a medicine that would produce such gratifying results in cases of stomach troubles, biliousness or constipation, his whole time would be used in preparing this one medicine.
